vorce granted upon the payment of costs in several other cases yesterday in the Court of Common Pleas of Bucks county by Judge William C.
Ryan.

In the case of Joseph M. Wollard and Grace M. Wollard, against George A. Hussey, Jr., the Court, in decree confirmed absolutely and the libel dis-

Morris J. Roberts, of Newtown. De-

Bristol Attorney Weds
Resident Of Philadelphia

Announcement of the marriage of Miss Mary Bigelow Jennings, daughter of Mrs. William Willard Rud-sill, 5014 Spruce street, Philadelphia, to John Leslie Kilcoyne, Esq., Bath street, Bristol, was made today.

According to the announcement the wedding took place June 30th in St.
James Church, 38th and Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

The bride is manager of the Damm Millinery Shop, 1205 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. The honeymoon was spent at Atlantic City.

The couple will take up their residence in Bristol in the near future.

Morrisville Folks
Want Bus Transportation

MORRISVILLE, July 12.—Residents of Manor Park section of Morrisville are considering ways and means of getting better transportation to and from Trenton. It is said an effort will be made to interest some bus company in the proposition and then appeal to the Public Service Commission of Pennsylvania to grant the franchise.

Residents of this section have been fighting for either better trolley service or a bus line for a long time, but there never has been any concerted effort made in the right direction. The matter has been taken up with the trolley company from time to time but it is said there has been little or no improvement in the service. Some weeks ago when the new trolley ordinance was proposed and passed on two readings, it was said by the trolley officials, that this new loop would give the lower section the trolley service they demanded—but the residents there refused to accept this promise as they say they have had so many promises from trolley officials before, and then they would not permit the running of freight trains through the streets of Morrisville just to get trolley passenger service.

Since the new trolley ordinance has been killed and little hope is entertained for improved trolley service from the companies holding the trolley franchises here, the bus proposition is being agitated. Those interested in the proposition have expressed the belief that if the Public Service Commission can be shown the kind of service the lower end is receiving from the trolley company, the bus privilege will be granted. Facts and figures in reference to the service to and from Trenton afforded the residents of the southern section will be offered in evidence and attorneys will be engaged to present the matter, it is said.

Held Under $3,000 Bail On Drunken Driving Charge

A West Bristol man is being held under $3000 bail for further hearing in an accident case, in which he is charged with driving while under the influence of liquor, aggravated assault and battery, assault and battery by automobile, reckless driving, and failure to stop and render assistance to the injured.

The individual under arrest is Thomas Corrigan, Newportville Road.
Corrigan was driving a touring car along Cedar avenue, Croydon, in the direction of State Road, when he ran down Francis Kirk and Walter Maurer both residents of Croydon.

Kirk received a broken leg; and Maurer was dragged a distance of 100 feet before he was able to free himself from the machine. Corrigan, apparently making no effort to stop, swerved across Cedar avenue onto the pavement and struck a Chevrolet coach, owned and driven by Joseph Haverlin, 503 Cornwell street, Philadelphia.
The two machines were badly damaged.

After crashing into the coach, Corrigan jumped from his car and running across the fields, made his way to his home. He was arrested a short time later by officer H. Lincoln Hughes.

In speaking of the affair, Haverlin told that upon seeing the Corrigan machine coming toward him in a zig-zag manner, ran his coach onto the side-walk to avoid the car. However the Corrigan machine was also driven onto the side-walk, plunging into Haverlin's auto.

Mr. and Mrs. John Kennedy, 501 E.
Cornwall street, Philadelphia, were accompanying Haverlin, and Mrs.
Kennedy was slightly injured.

Kirk and Maurer were taken to the Harriman Hospital for treatment, and later discharged. Kirk will return to the institution today however, where he will remain until he is more fully recovered.

Corrigan was taken by officer Hughes before Squire John Walmsley, Croydon, where he was given a hearing. He is now lodged in the Bristol police station, and will be removed to the Doylestown jail today.

MYSTERY ABOUT MAN
FOUND ON ROAD

Found Unconscious and Is Treated at Harriman Hospital

GAVE NAME AS DRESSER

HULMEVILLE, July 12.—A man, thought to be of Polish extraction, was found along the Hulmeville Road 20 yards from the Hulmeville bridge in Bensalem Township, on Sunday evening, in an apparently unconscious condition.

When discovered by George Wheeler who was on his way to his home here, the man was lying face downward on the bank at the side of the road, and when Constable Horace Prickett was summoned to take the helpless individual to the Harriman Hospital, many were of the opinion that the victim was partially paralyzed.

A straight path across the roadway showed where the victim had been dragged and placed upon the bank in such a manner that breathing was difficult. This gave to him a pallor almost deathlike, and he was rushed to the Bristol institution.

He regained consciousness during the night, and gave his name as Dresser, but no further information about himself. No marks were found on his body, which would indicate he had been struck by an automobile. He was discharged from the Hospital yesterday.

William Tomlinson
Dies Very Suddenly

ANDALUSIA, July 12.—A life-long resident of Andalusia was claimed by death suddenly yesterday, in the person of William Tomlinson, husband of Carrie King Tomlinson.

For a number of years Mr. Tomlin-son was employed as a motorman by the Trenton, Bristol and Philadelphia Street Railway Company, and recently retired. He was a member of Washington Camp, No. 539, P. O. S. of A.

Besides his wife, he is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Leon Babbitt, of Philadelphia, Mrs. William Faulkner, of Andalusia; two sons, Harry, who is proprietor of a store at Andalusia, and Lawrence, of Philadelphia; one brother, Howard, of Philadelphia.

The Rev. Marvin, of Andalusia, will conduct the funeral service from the late residence of the deceased, Bristol Pike, Andalusia, Thursday, at 3 P. M., daylight saving time. Burial will be made in William Penn Cemetery, Somerton, under the direction of the H. S. Rue Estate, undertakers.
Friends may call on Wednesday evening.

WOMEN VOTERS' LEAGUE
IN CONFERENCE TODAY

Inter-County Meeting Being Held at Devon, Chester
County

BRISTOLIANS PRESENT

Plans are complete for the intercounty conference of the five eastern counties of the Pennsylvania League of Women Voters to be held today at the home of Mrs. Charles M. Lea, Devon, Chester County, Pa., according to an announcement made today at the State Headquarters, 1725 Spruce St., Philadelphia.

The convention was opened by Mrs. Whitney at 11 o'clock, daylight saving time, and Mrs. Chas. M. Lea, bestress, gave a short address of welcome. Following this Mrs. John M. Oden, of Swarthmore, discussed "The Direct Primary as a Nominating System." Mrs. John Y. Huber, Admore, discussed county courts including those in Philadelphia, which topic was also spoken of by Mrs. George S. Seitz, of Philadelphia.

"Registration and Enrollment" was the subject chosen by Mrs. Thomas Ross, of Doylestown. There was an opportunity following the speeches for discussion from the floor. At 1 o'clock the session was adjourned for luncheon. Each woman was a box lunch and further refreshments were obtained there. Mrs. Ernest Miles, of Kennett Square, had these arrangements in charge. The afternoon session will convene at 2 under the direction of Mrs. C. Albert Fox, who will conduct an open forum on county problems. Each county will present two questions and some of the most interesting questions will include the following: "Will women become a more effective force in Politics by using the group method?"
"How can women attain in Politics a broader tolerance of each other's opinion?" "How can we increase League Membership?" "Why Party Politics?"

The afternoon session will prove to be most interesting, and the round table idea is precisely the one the League most wishes to carry out.

The last feature on the program will be a playlet entitled "Citizens at Their Worst," the same being enacted by new voters from Montgomery county.

The scene is laid in a polling place at 7 a. m. on Primary Election day.
The play endeavors to show some of the appalling mistakes which uninformed voters commit and the possibility of fraud which requires an experienced eye to detect. The voters taking part in the meetings are from Philadelphia, Chester, Montgomery, Delaware and Bucks counties.

—Daniel Koch, of Haddon Heights, Pa., returned to his home on Tuesday from a several days' visit to Billy Paynter, at the home of his parents, Rev. and Mrs. Henry Stuart Paynter, of Radcliffe street.

—Miss Mame Mulligan, of Corson street, entertained last week Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Gallagher, of Philadelphia.

TOTS ENJOY FIRST DAY AT THE PLAYGROUNDS

Youngsters Stand in Line Ready To Get On The Sliding Board

ENJOY THE PROGRAMME

A strange sight was presented at the high school grounds yesterday morning when at the time of the opening of the playground for the summer season as many as 100 tots would stand in line at one time, waiting for their turn to hurriedly cover the sliding-board.

The attendance for the first day was approximately 375, and those in charge, Miss Mary A. Wilkinson assisted by Miss Virginia Prout, report that there were dozens more waiting for a chance to enjoy the swings, etc.

The children indulged in singing early in the morning, and for the balance of the day romped with glee on the many pieces of apparatus.

It is the hope of the two instruct-resses to teach the youngsters to play volley ball, dodge ball, bean-bag games, etc. Opening exercises will take place at both the morning and afternoon periods each day.

If any individuals have bean bags, volley balls or other articles that would afford amusement which they desire to donate, the teachers at the high school ground will appreciate same.

The Misses Mary Fine and Margaret Priestley were kept busy with their charges at the Wood street school building. There were 150 in attendance the first day, and the children thoroughly enjoyed themselves for the two periods, from 9 to 12 and from 1 to 4 o'clock.

Songs were sung, and then stories were told to the boys and girls. The games will be varied from time to time as the work at the playground progresses.

It is reported by Miss Marian Hellings and Miss Mildred I. Bell that 175 young boys and girls were present on the first day the playground was open this year at the Bath street school building.

All took advantage of the sand-pile; and enjoyed as well the see-saws, swings and sliding boards. A short story hour took place, following the opening program. Songs will also assist in the formation of the program throughout the weeks to come.

Preparations About Ready For Hospital Lawn Fete

Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week are the days chosen for the annual lawn fete for the benefit of the Harriman Hospital. The affair will be sponsored as usual by the Ladies Auxiliary of the hospital.

Each afternoon a card party will take place, while in the evening there will likewise be attractions of note.
Ice cream, soft drinks, cakes, fancy work, etc. will be placed on sale.

On Saturday afternoon a lengthy program of sports will be enjoyed by the townspeople, and it is expected that the attendance this year will surpass that of previous occasions.

A TRAFFIC PROBLEM

Sooner or later the community must choose between utility, coupled with necessity, and beauty, coupled with tradition. At least once in the life of every community, whether of colonial settlement or modern product of a realtor's advertising, there comes a time when one road or the other must be traveled. At the fork in the road every traveler must choose for himself.

It is coincidental that traffic has been the vehicle which has most frequently brought communities to the puzzling cross-roads. The need for broader thoroughfares and the menace of highway curves and obstructions make it mandatory upon states, counties, cities and towns to answer the question:

Soldiers' and firemen's monuments and elaborate fountains raised by community pride in public squares a half century ago are today making traffic control extremely difficult if not impossible in many cities and towns. The Lincoln Highway Association threatened to change the route of that highway if a Pennsylvania city on the highway did not remove the monument on its public square. The city had been debating the question for years while traffic at its busiest street intersection is in constant chaos. In some communities the broad open courts themselves provide traffic problems. Ancient trees, historical buildings, landmarks, valuable buildings present similar difficulties.

Reverence for traditions, landmarks and monuments is deep-rooted in the citizen after centuries of cultivation. Traffic needs and problems are as notional as they are practical. The public will watch with interest this battle between sentiment and utility.

OBSTACLES.

The director of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce who says that "hit and run" motorists should be fired on by officers who may be present at the scene of accidents and these officers should shoot to kill seems to assume that officers are likely to be present, which in most cases would do violence to fact.

That the "hit and run" driver would receive not more than his just deserts were he shot and killed might be true, but in order to stop the practice some effective means of bringing such offenders to book other than relying on an officer being present and accurate in his aim needs be devised. A driver who would run after hitting usually is of the class likely to be circumspect when in the presence of an officer but not averse to trampling on the rights of others when he feels that he has a chance to get away with it.

It is a difficult matter to trace the perpetrator of a "hit and run" crime. The offender has at his command the means of getting away speedily. Unless someone witnesses the accident and secures the number of the car the chances of detection are slight. Yet there is more likelihood of capturing the cowardly driver in this way than in the chance that an officer will be present.

Man's greatest discovery, says a scientist, was the principle of the wheel. Where indeed, would the water wagon be without it?

Every little while one sees a report of an accident caused by a bee getting into the automobile. Why doesn't some accessory dealer bring out a bee swatter?

What Every Girl Should Know

By GISA PRUCHONE

Copyright, 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
"WHAT EVERY GIRL SHOULD KNOW," with Patsy Ruth Miller, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
Mary Sullivan—slender, beautiful, red-headed—is a tennis champion. A poetical, spiritual girl is Mary, despite her physical prowess. Her mother died leaving her a living. Her spirit lives on in Mary. Mary becomes acquainted with Wally Mason, a young reporter. Mary keeps house for her mother, David and Robert. David, the family support, hopes Mary will get safely married; but Mary disbelieves in love. Wally tells her he loves her. She, troubled, says she does not love him. Coming home, she learns David has killed a girl in an auto accident.

CHAPTER IV—Continued
The white face of Mary hurt young Robert. Her head had slipped into a corner of the high-backed chair, and her eyes were set on something straight ahead. Presently young Robert saw something limp and round tremble in the corners of her eyes, then fall to her cheeks. They came with the precision of sentinels, did the tears, slowly, silently, two by two, down the length of her cheeks. To fall wherever they would. Young Robert had never seen Mary cry. He howled, as small boys will at the something that is uncommon, weird, the something that carries with it a nameless terror. Young Robert howled, and flung himself headlong upon his sister where she sat, with head making a dizzying burst of color against the soberness of the high-backed chair.

CHAPTER V
The Grahams, as might be gathered from mention of the space they commanded in the daily press, were the elite. Not, understand, of the elite, but they were the elite. There was old B. Jasper Graham, who owned most of the town's real estate, as hard-headed and hard-hearted as old reprobate as had ever driven a close bargain; and Mollie Sumner Graham, a towering white haired grand dame who drove B. Jasper. Then, of course, there was Arthur, who drove them both with silken leashes, and if we must go on, there had been Bernice, Arthur's fiancée, who had driven him. A right merry merry-go-round, with Arthur, perhaps, crack driver. Not by virtue of his expert handling of the reins, but because of the fortuitous vantage ground in which fate had placed him. Arthur had been the center of what little affection there had simmered in the family and had learned at an early age to leap the shafts of love that radiated toward him, securing and holding the trench of the foe—the hearts of old B. Jasper and Mollie Graham. And, holding the trench, he directed their destinies with all the savvy and careless ease of a Napoleon, needing but to lift his forefinger to have his subjects about with fervor.

"Can't you understand, mother, can't you at all?"

"Vive L'Empereur!" Be it mentioned to the credit of Arthur that the air of obsequiousness which usually surrounded the potentate did not go to his head. He had developed into a staid, sober young man, somewhat weary with the parade of the world—that section of it with which he came into contact by reason of his affluence—a weariness which he tried to abate by a somewhat belated, albeit sincere interest in what he called "the hard actualities."

Bernice had formed part of that interest. Bernice had indeed been a "hard actuality." She was neither part nor parcel of England's nobility, despite the relish with which the press had pounced upon that part of her ancestry that had boasted of titled English blood. As a matter of fact she had been born in Vermont, though all of her schooling and through her life had possessed the graciousness of an English background. Arthur Graham had been considered as good a means as any to re-establish the family purse upon its former plane of sleek and well-filled felicity, and thus their engagement. Bernice very graciously consented to be loved, and Arthur had enjoyed the role of survivor as something rare. Whether or not this congenial state would have continued had Bernice lived, is difficult to forestall. Mollie Graham had grumbled at the advent of this suave usurper of the throne and old B. Jasper had chuckled. He had termed Bernice "a high-gear dilly" and had assured Arthur that she would spend his money well. "That, at least, will relieve me of one burden," Arthur had responded dryly. He had hoped for children with Bernice. Nice tow-headed youngsters with long legs and piping voices. Whether or not his hopes would have been realized—that, too, is difficult to forestall.

It was at this precipitous stage of events that David's most truck had lumbered into view like a heavy-footed uncouth fate, and snatched Bernice from the silkiness of Arthur's limousine, and from his life, leaving him with a minor scratch or two. The newspapers had shrieked their headlines and Mollie Graham had sobbed heavily, demanding to know who was to send the news to England and why need she be thus cursed out of all the world of prospective mothers-in-law? Old B. Jasper stormed and flung high forefingers to heaven, claiming justice. Arthur? He had been left a bit more weary, a bit more dull of eye, and he took to a band of mourning for his left arm, which, incidentally, he wore with that careless grace with which he invested all his garments. His mother, fearful of what the neighbors would say, thought there was something not quite decent about the nonchalance with which he invested the crepe. She made no allowance for the nakedness of soul which would have been revealed to the salt gaze of the world had the cover of nonchalance been removed. Mollie Graham didn't make allowance for very much at any time. Heavy footed, heavy hearted, her efforts to squeeze her corpulence into the most fragile of apertures always resulted in chaos for those most intimately concerned, and her cry was that she always did her best and her duty as she saw it. "That's the trouble," old B. Jasper had snorted. "You're so darn near-sighted." At least Bernice saved Arthur from family scenes during the short period of her reign. She had always carried with her the air of royalty, and Mollie and B. Jasper had bent the knee, albeit with much groaning of hinges that hadn't been used since the first days of Jasper's real-estate triumph in what then had been a raw young town at the edge of a sun splashed river.

But now Bernice of the regal air was gone, and Arthur was considering leaving Garden City for New York and peace. Mollie wailed. "How can you have peace in New York, Arthur, that is understood to be the noisiest of cities? And how can you have the heart to go, with Bernice hardly cold in the ground and the trial so near? And how can you bear to leave your mother who has had more than her share of the world's trouble, heaven knows, what with one thing and another and Bernice gone and Jasper raising the skies to have that meat-packer sent to the chair, and oh, my heaven, what will my unhappy life be without you?"

"Mother—please don't get worked up again. Your heart."

"He tells me my heart," with dramatic fervor to the room a large. "He tells me my heart, then leaves me with it to pain like a stone in my breast!"

"Mother—please! His test came together at that."

"Then tell me you won't go, my dear son."

"I've got to go, mother." And then, in hopes that she might savor a little of the painful recollection that every tree, every curving in Garden City carried for him, he pleaded, "Can't you understand mother, can't you at all?"

"I understand nothing, my dear boy, but that you wish to leave your mother. You wish to leave your mother, who has no one but you. You don't count your father, do you, Arthur? You know how he tortures my poor heart that has borne with him these many years—treads on it and tortures it—"

"Mother, please. I'll not go."

"Thank you, my darling. Thank you. Your poor mother thanks you. Then you will be here for the trial, and you will testify to send that meat-packer to the chair! I couldn't bear to think that he might get off free with my poor, beautiful Bernice hardly cold under ground."

"Don't worry, mother. He won't get off free."

She brightened. "Well, Arthur, certainly not, if you testify." A shudder went through the corpulence of her frame. "When I think how close you were to death, my darling!"

The third unconsumed cigarette was thrown into the grate. "I've told you repeatedly, mother, that Dave Sullivan was not to blame!" (To be continued.)

BUY IN BRISTOL!

A DOLLAR SPENT IN BRISTOL IS WORTH TWO SPENT ELSEWHERE BECAUSE IT IS REINVESTED BY LOCAL PEOPLE IN LOCAL ENTERPRISES AND HELPS TO PAY FOR LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS

Did you ever really give the subject of the local merchant and you any serious thought?

Perhaps you are a loyal citizen and patronize local shops and stores as a matter of loyalty, but as this is not a lecture it will do no harm to read this, anyhow.

Your local merchant is first a citizen, a resident of your community the same as you are.

He lives in your community, pays taxes along with you for the upkeep and improvement of your community; he raises his family and sends his children to school—schools which he helps, with you, to maintain.

If he is a butcher, he buys clothes and shoes for his family from a fellow-merchant. No matter what his line of business, he spends money with other business men of the community.

He banks in local banks; he takes his family of an evening to the local shows.

Summed up, the money he makes in the community is spent in it.

Were it not for your local merchant, there would be no schools, no paved streets, no public buildings, no progress nor prosperity. He is here day in and day out, rain or shine, giving his time and energy and money to whatever will benefit the district, taking part in the administrations of the community or aiding to regulate the administration for the best interests of the community by his vote.

HE IS A CITIZEN—

Is he not entitled, then, to consideration?

But there is something more than a call for your loyalty to him as citizen to citizen—neighbor to neighbor.

Living here as he does, he comes to know his customers. They are to him not "just customers," but "fellow citizens," "good neighbors." As he will be here tomorrow and the next day and next year, meeting his customers face to face, day after day, his business gets his personal attention—every transaction is a personal dealing between him and the patron.

He is your neighbor—your fellow citizen, building for tomorrow and next year, and fully cognizant that the only way to build is to sell good goods at right prices.

Your local merchant is in himself a guarantee of his goods and prices and services because he is always at the same stand meeting largely the same customers.

He cannot exist upon the patronage of transients—his livelihood comes from permanent residents; his aim is to make permanent residents regular customers. He must do this—hence his wares, his prices and his service are all and always arranged and held to this end.

You never heard your live-wire, wide-awake home merchant say, "Oh, well, one customer more or less makes no difference." Every customer, to him, is important; a new customer is eagerly sought, and a customer less—well, your local merchant will not let it happen if anything just and reasonable under the sun will prevent such a thing happening.

So not alone out of a sense of loyalty to your community, but for your own sake—for the sake of your purse and the satisfaction of being given personal attention and service—buy of our home merchants.

Executive Mansions Are Equipped With Frigidaire

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 12.—Electrical refrigeration, outstanding industrial development of the present administration, has become an inseparable part of kitchen arrangements for the Chief Executive.

The vacation White House in the Black Hills, the temporary White House on Dupont Circle and the Executive Mansion are all equipped with this type of refrigeration. In addition a special installation was recently made on the yacht Mayflower for exclusive use of the president and his guests.

A large electrically cooled cold storage box was placed in the Executive Mansion more than a year ago. Household electric ice-boxes and electric water coolers were installed in the temporary White House when it was prepared for official residence. In both places it functioned so satisfactorily that shortly before the recent presidential review of the fleet, it was placed aboard the Mayflower.

Exhaustive tests were conducted by the U. S. Bureau of Standards before the Mayflower installation was made. This was done to insure a type of refrigeration in keeping with many improvements which have been made upon the vessel since it became a part of the navy in 1898.

This particular refrigerator is a large size household model, direct frost coil cooled, gleaming and resplendent inside and out with white porcelain, handsomely trimmed with white metal. Across its front is swung a heavy metal bar to prevent unauthorized hands tampering with its contents.

Prior to removal of the Chief Executive and his official family to the vacation White House in the Black Hills, the same type of electrical refrigeration was installed there, as a matter of course.

Dodge Brothers To Announce New "Four"

It was learned today from authoritative sources that Dodge Brothers will shortly make a sensational announcement, probably concerned with a new line of fours. While nothing definite is available as to price or specifications it is understood that the new cars are to be the fastest fours in America and that they are to be priced at new low levels. It is also understood that the new cars will be more economical to operate than any cars of the same size ever built.

The body designs are said to be more radical than anything Dodge Brothers have undertaken in the four cylinder field. In all around beauty and excellence of appointments, in fact, the new cars are said to be unequalled by anything in their price class.

Announcement of this entirely new line of fours will be equivalent to a challenge to the whole industry in the four cylinder field. If such a line is marketed it is assured that the enormous resources of Dodge Brothers factories and the support of one of the greatest dealer organizations in the industry's history will be solidly behind it.

Should the new cars prove to be the fastest fours in America, Dodge Brothers will have one of the greatest selling advantages in its history. In the past this company has always emphasized the dependability of its cars. Nothing has ever been claimed as to their speed except that it has always been ample. Now with a four which combines great speed with the traditional qualities of Dodge Brothers cars, the company should be in an enviable position.

BILLY'S UNCLE

BUCKEYE BURG PINS HOPE ON BILLY WALLACE

Philadelphia, July 12.—On the day in New York when the battle-scarred Eugene Cigrud, a polio who had won laurels and wounds in the World War, knocked out Johnny Kilbane and shared the feather-weight title, Cleveland lost the first and only champion metropolis by the banks of the Cuyahoga ever knew in fistiana. But the boga believes that fate and destiny have ruled that another son of the Ohio city will soon rule one of the domains in fisticuffs.

For the Cleveland has been signed to meet Tommy Herman in the final bout on the card at the second summer show of the season at the Phils Ball Park, under the auspices of Jules E. Aronson. And thereby hangs a tale at once interesting and informative.

Ere one relates this story, however, it is meet that a squint be taken at the record of this sensation of the Middle West. 'Tis no feeble feat to knock out Lou Kid Kaplan in five rounds, and win the renown of being the first boxer to put the sleep wallop to the former featherweight king.

Count with this achievement a victory over Babe Herman, a triumph over Billy Petrolle, a no decision battle with Sammy Mandell, present
